Are You A "Tender Foot"?

Not in the wild western sense, but in the sense of having tender feet. If you are, we want to fit your next pair of Shoes for you. There's a great deal in the way a shoe is first put on and the way the foot settles into it. If it's tight where it should be and loose where it should be, there'll be very little trouble. We make a study of these things. Prices? Of course they're right or we would not sell so many Shoes.

DARING TRAIN ROBBERY.

An East Bound Southern Pacific Train Held Up Near Sacramento.

Fifteen Thousand Dollars Said to Have Been Secured by the Robbers.

Sacramento, Cal., Oct. 12.—The eastbound overland Southern Pacific train which left San Francisco at 6 o'clock was stopped and robbed last night about seven miles from this city. Between twelve and fifteen thousand dollars was secured by the robbers after a short but spirited gun fight in which Wells Fargo's messenger was the only one injured.

Engineer Scott of the held up train says: "The track-walker was forced to flag the train at Sheep camp, about seven miles from Sacramento in Yolo county. Four torpedoes were placed on the track by the robbers. When the train came to a standstill the robbers ordered the engineer and fireman to go to the express car and have the messenger open the door. The messenger put his head out of the window and the robbers fired two shots. The window glass was shattered, severely cutting the messenger's head. The messenger turned his shot gun loose through the car door. The two robbers responded with their guns but no one was hurt. During the progress of the shooting a bag transfer man was fired at but not hurt. After the shooting the express car door was opened by the messenger. The engineer and firemen were ordered inside, one of the robbers following, while the other stood guard at the door. The messenger was ordered to unlock the safe, which he did promptly. Three or four sacks of money were taken from the safe, the amount of which is not known. The robbers then compelled the engineer and fireman to uncouple the engine from the train. Two brakemen were made to assist. The robbers placed the sacks of money on the engine, and took the engine and headed for Sacramento, leaving the engineer, fireman and brakemen behind. After some distance the robbers abandoned the engine. The lever was reversed and the engine returned to the train at about the rate of six miles an hour. The engine collided with the baggage car, crushing in the front platform. The engineer and fireman boarded the train and started for Sacramento. The engineer found a mask made out of a portion of a pair of drawers. There were two robbers. The engineer and fireman complained of their backs which they said were hurt by the robbers striking them in the back with their guns. They each had two big revolvers besides a rifle each. The robbers' faces were blackened. Both are big men." The train was the eastbound overland train train No. 3, leaving San Francisco at 6 p.m., and due at Sacramento at 9:40 p.m. Three tramps, one of whom was on the tender of the engine, were arrested as witnesses. A posse of railroad detectives have left for the scene of the robbery.

The country is aroused between here and Davisville and the officials are making every effort to capture the robbers. News is expected at any moment. It is reported at noon that the amount captured by the train robbers is $15,000.

San Francisco, Oct. 12.—The Southern Pacific railway company and Wells-Fargo Express company this afternoon offered a reward of $2500 for each of the men who robbed the overland train near Davisville last night and $5000 for the recovery of the amount stolen, which they assume was $50,000.

Track Walker Kelley tells a story which entirely corroborates the story told by the tramp Colton. The bridge tender at the Yolo bridge saw the engine as it brought the robbers toward the city and saw them as they left the train. He heard the sound of breaking glass when they smashed the headlight, before sending the engine back, so that they must have come within a mile of Sacramento. It is supposed the robbers crossed the river in a boat and may be in Sacramento.

CLEVELAND'S RETICENCE.

Has Not Yet Come Out in Support of Hill.

Washington, Oct. 12.—If the president were to return to Washington and consult his cabinet as to what the administration attitude towards the New York campaign should be, he would discover at least two secretaries who believe that he ought to write a letter endorsing the regular ticket headed by Senator Hill. Neither secretary has met Hill except on the most formal occasions, and their sentiments are in no wise influenced by personal feelings towards the senator. Hill as a presidential candidate has been vigorously opposed by both, and there is no likelihood of their ever agreeing to his nomination. Both secretaries share the conviction that defeat in New York cannot fail to reflect on the administration and to seriously jeopardize party success in the future. But President Cleveland has not written to a single member of the cabinet with the possible exception of Secretary Lamont, and has not given any advice. Colonel Lamont insists that he has received no word from Gray Gables, but his movements during the last three days would indicate that he has not been kept wholly in the dark as to the president's views. It is no secret that Mr. Lamont does not believe that Senator Hill would be elected and it is understood that he has talked in a discouraging strain with several Democratic leaders. He is not using any of his influence to promote the success of the ticket. The politicians have not entirely despaired of securing a letter of endorsement from the president. Were it not for the fact that the leaders hesitate to break in on Mr. Cleveland's vacation there is no doubt that several prominent Democrats would have made a trip to Buzzard's Bay before this to urge the president to come out in support of the New York ticket.

New York, Oct. 12.—Though the campaign has not fairly opened, politicians with sporting proclivities and members of the gambling fraternity have sized up the situation and are posting odds on their favorites. Mr. Phil Dwyer was approached yesterday by an individual who offered to bet $2000 to $1000 that Morton would beat Hill. Col. Bill Brown offered to bet $5000 even that Strauss would be elected mayor. At the time he found no takers, but a western politician bet him $500 even that Goff would be elected recorder. As the book now stands large odds are offered on Morton, but Straus has the advantage in the local contest.

QUARRELING ABOUT THE SPOILS.

A Conservative M. P. Tenders his Resignation and then Withdraws It.

Ottawa, Oct. 12.—Robillard, M. P. for Ottawa, had a dispute with the members of the government over the patronage for the city, and placed his resignation, duly signed, in the premier's hands. Pressure from the French Canadians and an apology from one of the ministers for an alleged insult offered him had the desired effect, and Robillard has withdrawn his resignation. He does not hesitate to talk strongly against the government.

President of the St. Lawrence Sugar Refinery Company Commits Suicide.

Montreal, Oct. 12.—Richard Elmenherst, president of the St. Lawrence Sugar Refinery company, committed suicide by shooting himself. Business losses are ascribed as the cause of the suicide. The deceased had met with heavy reverses in sugar stock and lost a lot of money in the Canada Bank Note company, which recently failed. His health has of late been bad. This, it is thought, unsettled his mind. Mr. Elmenherst was of German extraction, middle aged, and had long been connected with the sugar industry in Montreal.

Windsor, Oct. 12.—Chief Willis has arrested Edmond Chittendon, wanted at Leamington, charged with robbing U. S. mails. Chittendon is 22 years of age. His family is one of the most influential in Kentucky. He admits robbing the mails for two months while a mail clerk. Since then he has been a fugitive from justice.

Niagara Falls, Oct. 12.—Cornelius Vanderbilt and Chauncey Depew visited the Canadian falls to-day. John Haggart and Peter McLaren were also here with Sir Oliver Mowat and several members of the provincial government who are floating about in connection with his taking off. WILL CHINA CALL QUITS?

Report That They Have Tired of the War With Their Neighbors.

She Would Like to Indemnify Japan For What She Has Spent.

London, Oct. 12.—The Pall Mall Gazette publishes an interview with a leading Chinese official in London, in which he says with the exception of the naval battle at Yalu, not a serious blow has been struck at China. This, he said, was merely the beginning of a great war. He denied that the battle at Ping Yang was a crushing defeat for the Chinese. When hostilities are renewed on a large scale he declares that China will produce an ample number of warships.

A dispatch to the Pall Mall Gazette from Yokohama says: "Otori Keisuke, the Japanese soldier and diplomat, has been recalled owing to his failure to effect Japanese reforms in Corea. Count Inouye, the Japanese minister of the interior, will shortly proceed to Corea."

A Tokio dispatch says Corea being cleared of the Chinese an opportunity has arrived for Japan to undertake the thorough internal reform of the government of the country. For this purpose the Japanese minister of the interior will proceed at once to Corea. Advices from Nankin report the outbreak of the Kolaibwen society fifty miles from Hankow. All is quiet at Wachang, but foreigners are not allowed to remain there.

A Shanghai dispatch says a rumor is in circulation there that China has sought to patch up peace with Japan by acknowledging an indemnity equal to the war expenditures of that country.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 12.—Humphrey P. Kendrick, a prominent merchant of this city, returned this morning from a four months' business trip to Japan. He escaped the interviewers at San Francisco. To a United Press correspondent he talked reluctantly about the war. He thinks the conflict disastrous from a commercial point of view, and thinks even if the Japanese should be victorious it will take years to recoup the losses. At Yokohama, Tokio, Kobe, Osaki, the old capital, and throughout the empire, Kendrick says, he never saw anything like the enthusiasm displayed. This is added to by the action of the mikado in going before the people uncovered and in personally directing the movements of the troops. When the emperor went to the front at Hiroshima the wildest enthusiasm was displayed. In going through Tokio the population turned out en masse. So far there is little doubt that the training of the Japs will result in their being victorious.

Every subject fit for service has volunteered. The government have not found it necessary to enlist them and the dranios, or two swordsmen, as the fighting contingent is called, have proved able to cope with the Chinese. The story of harbors being filled with torpedos is a ruse of the Japanese pure and simple. There is not a single torpedo in the inland sea. The only danger in travelling in the Orient now is in taking passage on a native vessel. Ships under foreign flags are safe.

JAPAN'S LATEST VICTORY.

Occupants of Wi Ju Fall Back Upon the Approach of the Japanese.

Actions of Different European Powers Respecting the Eastern War.

Shanghai, Oct. 11.—Various local rumors are in circulation, the most prominent being that forty thousand Japanese troops have landed near Suanhaikwan, on the boundary between the Chinese provinces of Manchuria and Chili, at the eastern end of the great wall which traverses China. The telegraph wires have been cut, thus hindering communication with the district. A report which is classed here as unreliable says that the Japanese have effected a landing near Newchwang, Gulf of Loao Tong. It is reported that several Japanese warships have been sighted off Takauar.

A dispatch received from Tientsin today states that the British and Russian ministers have arrived there and that they will proceed at once to Pekin. Another report which reached this city is that after a skirmish which took place north of the Yalu river yesterday the Japanese outposts were driven back across the river.

Advices received here from Port Arthur say that the repairs to the Chinese fleet engaged in the battle at Yalu river have been completed and that the fleet will proceed to sea to-day.

Suanhaikwan, where the Japanese are reported to have landed forty thousand troops, is directly on the railroad leading from Tientsin to Moukden, and is of great strategic importance. In fact the opinion has been expressed that if Suanhaikwan is captured there is nothing to prevent the Japanese from marching on Pekin. A Japanese fleet was reported to have been sighted off Suanhaikwan September 29.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 11.—The Novisti says to-day on the war: "In the event of being victorious Japan will establish herself firmly in Corea and thus become a constant menace to Russia. At the same time China will threaten Russia from Manchuria. The result possibly will be that we will be unable to maintain our Siberian frontier. The only means of averting this is to send troops at once to Corea and Manchuria and annex both."

Vienna, Oct. 11.—The Pholitiscer correspondent says that on the 6th Great Britain addressed a circular note to the British diplomatists accredited to the great powers, directing them to open negotiations with a view to effecting an understanding as to the measures to protect Europeans in China; also to determine the limit to which the powers would permit the Japanese to advance in Corea.

London, Oct. 11.—The Times has this dispatch from its Tientsin correspondent: "The recent withdrawal of English and other families from Pekin appears to have been the result of a Japanese ruse. Information was imparted confidentially from Tokio of an intended descent upon the coast of the province of Pichili and attacks upon Pekin. This induced the foreign ministers to take measures for the safety of the women. The Japanese expected to excite Pekin and its population, but among the Chinese the effect has been rather to arouse the court to a resolute defence of the emperor. The popular feeling in Pekin and Tientsin is usually friendly to foreigners, whom the natives regard as a sort of pledge of safety. The chronic street rowdies can easily be controlled, provided the foreign ministers and consuls insist upon the Chinese officials doing their duty. The former heretofore have been culpably lax in this respect."

The Times corespondent in Paris says that negotiations are proceeding between Germany, France, the United States and Russian and England with a view to diplomatic action for the restoration of peace in the east. None of these powers, the correspondent states, advocate interfering with the course of events by other than diplomatic means.

London, Oct. 11.—The Central News correspondent in Wi Ju gives further details of a battle reported earlier in the day from Tokio. He says that the Japanese force had been greatly delayed in its advance by the badness of the roads. The heavy guns could be brought forward but slowly and the troops were often compelled to wait for supplies. The planks taken for use to be used repeatedly to make the roads passable. The main Japanese column reached Yung Chung, a short distance south of Wi Ju, on October 4. There was no signs of the enemy. Four days later scouts, who had been sent out toward Wi Ju, reported that a small Chinese force still occupied the city. The strength of the enemy, estimated at 20,000, a strong body of infantry and cavalry, supported by light artillery, was thrown forward at once. The Chinese offered little resistance. They retired before the first attacking party and eventually struck and fled across the Yalu. The Chinese loss was hardly more than a hundred killed and wounded. The Japanese line of communication is now complete througout Corea. The Japanese expect further reinforcements to come to Wi Ju by water. A Japanese officer has been appointed governor-commissary of Wi Ju. The field telegraph has been in working order since last evening, and regular courier service between Wi Ju and the rear of the column began to-day.

The Central News correspondent in Tokio says that the emperor of Japan will receive personally eight Corean officials, who will start for Hiroshima on Saturday to thank him for his support of the Corean rebels. The envoys will present to his majesty a memorial requesting that Japan undertake to protect Corea permanently from foreign encroachments. The correspondent adds: "The Japanese government means to establish Corea on a strong foundation in order that she may aid Japan in repelling the encroachments of Russia and the other powers. Rumors that European interference to limit the war is possible caused astonishment here. The government cannot stop the war until its demands shall have been satisfied. There must be guarantees that China will not interfere further with Corea and an ample war indemnity must be paid."

The Tientsin correspondent of the Central News says: "Li Hung Chang has closed contracts with Krupps' agent to supply the government with guns and ammunition, on the condition that the same shall be delivered before the closing of navigation for the winter. Large supplies are coming to the city from Canton and other arsenals."

NEWFOUNDLAND STORMS.

Many Vessels Lost and Others Damaged.

St. John's, Nfld., Oct. 11.—Communication with St. Pierre Miquelon is interrupted, and details of the havoc wrought by the gale on Tuesday night are obtained only with great difficulty. The gale raged all Tuesday night with heavy rain. When the storm began there was a large fleet of fishing vessels that had been driven in from the grand banks by the gale of ten days ago. There were more than three hundred vessels at anchor. When the gale was at its height many of these vessels broke loose from their moorings, drove ashore and became a total loss. Several came into collision with other vessels, smashing them up. Great confusion remained ing them up. Great confusion reigned, the crews of many vessels abandoning their craft. Between forty and fifty vessels went ashore. Eight of these were total losses, all having from 500 to 700 quintals of fish aboard. The pilot boat Le Pourtante was also wrecked. No lives were lost in port. The crew of the Avelan, numbering 20 men, who were supposed to have been lost, were found safe to-day when the storm abated. They had escaped to vessels which had ridden out the storm safely. The gravest apprehension exists in St. Pierre concerning many fishing vessels that were on the banks in the recent gale.

All returning ships were more or less damaged. The French banking fleet numbers nearly 400 vessels. From accounts brought in it is believed many were unable to withstand the gale and were lost with all hands. The exact number lost cannot be estimated for a few days but it is believed ten ships at least have gone down. The damage done by the gale is so general that the fishermen will be compelled to abandon bank fishing for this season, thus suffering a further serious loss. Many reports of disaster by the recent gale are reaching St. John's. The Gloucester fishing schooner Martha C. was lost at the Bay Islands, but the crew were saved. The steamer Virginia Lake had her decks swept, her engine room smashed and other damage. The Gloucester schooner Annie Wastrie lost her anchor and dories. One of her crew was swept overboard but was afterwards rescued. The vessel leaked so badly that the crew were at the pumps for two days and nights.

CATTLE SHIP IN A STORM.

New York, Oct. 12.—Cattle men who reached New York yesterday on the National Line steamer Greece from London, brought news that the Europe, another ship of the same line, encountered a terrific storm during her last run from this port to London and lost nearly half of the live stock she carried. Owing to an accident to her steering gear the Europe lay hopless in the trough of the sea for twelve hours and a pitiable slaughter of her cattle and sheep resulted. The Europe sailed from New York on September 2nd with a miscellaneous cargo in addition to which she carried 584 cattle and 599 sheep. She ran into a terrific northwesterly gale on the afternoon of September 8th, and before night her rudder chain parted and it was impossible to keep her head to the wind. She fell off and rolled heavily, shipping seas continually until the cattle pens on the main and spar decks were flooded. The bedding was washed from beneath the feet of the cattle and th flooring became so slippery that they could not stand. The ship labored terrildy and before midnight the crew got some oil bags overboard to prevent the seas breaking over her. Before morning the pens on the port side gave way and the cattle were washed overboard. Dead cattle lay about all over the ship. An hour later, while from the pens, which had stood the strain, an incessant bellowing told that the slaughter continued. A sheep pen on the port side gave away too, and many of the animals were crushed to death. In some instances plunging bullocks were thrown into the sheep pens and struggled there until they died. The crew was small and although the wind abated in the morning a heavy sea was still running. It was not till four o'clock in the afternoon that the steering gear was repaired an the steamer got under way. Then the sailors proceeded to clean the decks. They threw overboard 233 cattle and 187 sheep. Others were subsequently killed.

A ROUGH PASSAGE.

Schooner Lily L. Damaged by an Explosion.

San Francisco, Oct. 11.—The sealing schooner Lily L. reached here from Sand Point to-day after a passage of fifteen days with several hundred sealskins for C. L. Ladd. According to her report the vessel had a narrow escape from total destruction. Owing to an explosion of gunpowder the deck from stern to quarterdeck was blown off and five of the crew badly burned. The accident happened on May 20, seventy-five miles southeast of Cape Yanno. A boat was being lowered, when a can of gunpowder exploded. At the time the unfortunate members of the crew were in proximity to the explosion. They were hurled in all directions by the shock; their clothes were stripped from their bodies and their flesh was burned from their bones. Everything possible was done for the wounded, but their sufferings were intense. About five o'clock on the evening of the accident the Lily L. overhauled a Japanese schooner and asked for aid, but the crew of the schooner refused assistance because sufficient coin was not offered to pay for carrying the victims. Captain Thompson was forced to put into Hakodate.

CANADIAN NEWS.

The News of Eastern Canada in Short Paragraphs.

Mr. Macfarlane, Dominion analyst, has returned from a visit to the wine growing districts of Ontario, where he tested the varieties of grapes to ascertain the gravity of the juice. The test gave from 13 to 25 per cent. of saccharine matter, indicating that certain varieties of Canadian grapes will yield as rich musts as do the French and Rhine grapes. Mr. Macfarlane's conclusion is that Canada can produce just as good wine as any other country in the world. Our people, however, would require to have faith in the product to be prepared to pay a price to enable the wine to be sold in bottles.

A Brandon dispatch says: Last evening a fire broke out in a small house situated in the eastern portion of the city. There was the usual rush of humankind to the scene of the conflagration, which in the darkness of the night made a striking effect as it lit up the heavens beautifully. The yard engine of the C. P. R. was resting noiselessly near the passenger depot, when the engineer in charge thought to move in the direction of the fire. Just then two or three men stepped on the engine, and were promptly and brusquely ordered off. One of the strangers, a man of about 45, appealed to the engineer, stating that he also was an engineer. This was sufficient, so he was invited to re-take his position, and, according to custom, was also asked to take the lever, which he did. Opening wide the throttle, the party were soon on their flight to the fire. In the meantime the stranger was being taken in by the crew; imagine their surprise as the glare of the cat-light revealed to them the features of the governor-general of Canada. In a few moments their destination was reached, when all hands, including Lord Aberdeen, enjoyed the affair. That engineer thinks that his excellency knows a thing or two about a locomotive engine and is a companionable fellow if he has blue blood in his veins.

CATHOLIC SALOONKEEPERS.

Bishop Watterson Again Discusses the Liquor Question at Chicago, Ill.

Mgr. Satolli Pleased to Hear That His Decision Has Had a Happy Effect.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—The birthday of Father Matthew, the apostle of temperance, was celebrated to-day with a parade, in which 15,000 people participated. Catholic orders, Protestant societies, children from the public, parochial and private schools, Good Templars and similar organizations were in the procession, which was reviewed by Governor Altgeld, Mayor Hopkins and other notables. The parade was preliminary to a general mass meeting in the Auditorium, with Bishop Watterson, of Columbus, Ohio, as chief orator. The committee received the following reply from Mgr. Satolli to a letter complimenting his stand for temperance, and inviting him to be present:

"I am pleased to hear that my recent decision has produced so happy an effect. It is a matter of deep regret that so many Catholics are engaged in the saloon traffic, which by its abuses is the cause of so much harm to our fellow men and scandal to all Catholic doctrine. Fondly trusting that this abuse may be mitigated, if not obliterated, and thus a cause of reproach be removed from the Catholics in America, I remains yours sincerely in Christ.

"SATOLLI."

A magnificent gathering assembled to-night at the Auditorium, the audience, as well as the speakers, including prominent representatives of all the leading denominations. Bishop Watterson was given a rousing reception. His addres dealt extensively with the controversy regarding the recent decision of Mgr. Satolli against saloon-keepers. Bishop Watterson said:

"Most of us here to-night will doubtless concede that the saloon business is not an evil in itself. At any rate the Catholic church does not excommunicate anyone merely because he is engaged in the liquor traffic. To suppose so is a mistake, and as countenance has been given to the order within the past fortnight by one of our distinguished fellow-citizens of Chicago, I will digress a moment to take notice of it.

"At a mass meeting during the German Catholic Congress in Louisville on the 25th of last month, Mr. Washington Hesing, postmaster of Chicago, and proprietor of the Illinois Staats Zeitung, made a lengthy speech in which he said that 'because the low dealers in wines and liquors have fostered lawlessness and crime, it is no reason why every dealer, among whom may be classed those who sell good Rhine wine and good German beer, should be excommunicated. I hold it to be a great mistake that the edict of Bishop Watterson will be considered a material concession to that narrow-minded element of our persuasion, which is constantly waging war upon our creed. Prohibitionists and temperance fanatics raised a cry of exultation, and Miss Willard sent her sisterly greetings. The German Catholic of this country is a true son of his church, but he is also a true patriot. He can be both with an honest mind and defend his rights.' Now Mr. Hesing either read the letter of the Bishop of Columbus and that of the apostolic delegate or he did not. If he read them, his condemnation of the apostolic delegate and me, even by insinuation, for what he did not say is unpardonable; if he did not read them he should not have spoken of them at all. Intentionally or unintentionally he misled his audience, and at the same time intensified a prejudice which grew out of an unfounded and unworthy suspicion that the blow was aimed with a partial hand. 'Prohibitionists and temperance fanatics,' he said, 'raised a cry of exultation.' More than 'prohibitionists and temperance fanatics' raised a cry of exultation. A cry of exultation went up all over the land from all who have at heart the well being of our communities and the honor of our country.

"The greatest injury that has been done to the progress of our faith in this country is the disgrace inflicted upon it by those Catholics, and their name is legion, who are abusing the saloon business to their own infamy and the dishonor of the church. The majority of saloon-keepers, it is charged, are Catholics. While I doubt the truth of this, even if you include those who are only Catholics in name, still, God knows, we have more than our share of them. This, however, the church is not responsible for, because she has protested over and over again against the abuse. No one knows better than she how to make just and equitable distinction, when she comes to deal with individual cases. But [illegible] as a class and as they have made themselves, not of exceptions, but the rule of a condition, not a theory. The apostolic delegate affirmed a decree, not excommunicating individual saloon-keepers, but regulating the relations of Catholic societies with those who are engaged in the liquor business, and this was done with full knowledge of the relation, condition, methods, practices and effects of the liquor traffic in this country. It was done, first, because the traffic is a dangerous one and easily abused; secondly, because it has been, and generally is now, abused by those who are engaged in it; thirdly, because on this account it has been generally disreputable and injurious to private and public morals; fourthly, because Catholics themselves have contributed in no small degree to make it so to the dishonor of the Catholic name and, fifthly, because our Catholic societies have been tainted in their honor and hampered in their influence, and too often dominated by those engaged in it.

"The Ctholic church, besides her other means of reaching the moral needs of her children, has one special way which no other religious organization has in dealing with the individual conscience of those who do not withdraw themselves from her influence. I refer to the confessional and the sacrament of penance. As a matter of fact, however, saloon-keepers who have the name of Catholics, and who conduct their business in an unlawful and immoral manner, are not much affected by either the church or the confessional, for they seldom go to either. We must therefore reach them by other means, for reach them we must, for the good of both church and country. If the liquor traffic in particular places becomes so outrageous, so bold and so defiant as to be controlled in no way other than in the legal wiping out of the saloons, then let the saloons be legally wiped out, and I say it in God's name and in the name of an outraged community, and the sooner they are legally wiped out in that case the better for the community, and the individuals and families that compose it."

THE FROG AND THE SNAKE.

How a Little Frog Made a Big Snake Work for his Dinner.

Last year, in early May, while resident engineer on the Mineral railroad, the great feeder and outlet of all the furnaces, iron and coal mines and limestone quarries in the Birmingham district of Alabama, I had in charge some masonry in the Calabee Valley line. At noon one day I climbed up and ate dinner on top of a high, bluff, rocky and bare, except where a few leaves had lodged when blown from the trees on either side. I had finished eating and had lazily sprawled out, almost asleep, when I heard a queer, quirking noise, together with a hiss, the latter of which awoke me quickly enough, for I knew the whole valley was infested with snakes. Much to my surprise, on jumping up and looking around I found a large black and gray snake, a coachwhip, with a poor little frog in front of him, preparing for his meal. I kept quiet, watching both and wondering what they would do. Easily and quite the snake coiled and struck, always missing the frog, which, facing him, leaped nimbly aside. Suddenly, without coiling, by a quick spring the snake caught the frog and held it fast. Then began a rather amusing scramble. The snake would gulp and twist, trying to swallow the frog, the frog trying to get away and croaking with terror. By a quick movement the frog got free when the snake opened its mouth to get a better grip. I noticed then for the first time that the frog, the frog trying to get away and long held tightly crosswise in his mouth. What did it hold to that for? I wondered. I soon saw. The snake again caught the frog and attempted to bolt it, but it was the stick that was cheating him out of his feast. He could grasp the frog, but the stick held across its mouth prevented him from swallowing it. Again the little frog got away, and, dodging about, faced his big enemy with his queer little blinking eyes and expanding throat, making a whistling croak and watching his adversary. The snake seemed to lose its temper and hissed and coiled rapidly, striking with fierce hate, but the frog sprang out of its way every time. Finally the snake seemed to give up the contest and stretched out wearily. Then froggy lost his head and started hopping away, only to be run down from behind and ignominiously swallowed after all. But I killed the enemy and ripped him open and gave the frog the freedom he certainly deserved.—Detroit Free Press.

EFFECTS OF COLORED GLASS

Results of Experiments With Flowers in England.

It is interesting to note that while the efforts of the late General Pleasantton to show that blue colored glass had a beneficial influence on plants growing beneath it, it seems to have failed to make any permanent impression on American [illegible] his death the English cultivators are believing they find good effects from it. Before us is a lecture by Professor Henslow on the effect of light on the germination of seeds. He tried a large number of experiments himself, and stated that violet colored glass had been used by a London grower of market flowers, and that under this glass his flowers bloomed fourteen days earlier than they would under ordinary circumstances; but Professor Henslow remarked that while he had flowers in this way, the plants themselves were undoubtedly weakened. He states as the results of his experiments that as far as the vital powers of plants were concerned colored glass of all kinds had an injurious effect in various degrees.—Meehan's Monthly.

THE MATTER OF COURTESY.

The Toronto Globe spoke well of Mr. Meredith on his retirement from politics because it could not do otherwise and express its opinion honestly. If either the Hon. John Haggart or Sir Adolphe Caron were to retire the Globe would speak of him in a very different fashion. There are papers and persons who would in such case accuse the Globe of want of courtesy, but the general public would not side with them, for the general public is quick to estimate the effusions of the fawning sycophant at their true worth. As the Globe is held up for a model of courtesy on account of what it has said of Mr. Meredith, it may be well to point to a few things which the Globe would not be likely to do. It would not accuse a contemporary of discourtesy and scold like a fishwife because that contemporary ventured to express its candid opinion of the course of any politician, whether retiring or advancing. The Globe would not concern itself with its neighbor's manners to the entire neglect of its own. In the matter of courtesy, as in many other matters, example is much better than preaching. There are people from whom lectures on good manners would be of use, but the scolding fishwife is not among the number.

A CHILDISH COMPLAINT.

The World rather bitterly complains that opposition is threatened for Mr. Martin in North Yale, Mr. J. T. Edwards being spoken of as a candidate It says: "Mr. Martin was successful at the general election held but recently, and it is very unfair to put him to the expense of another contest. Should he be defeated Yale would have no member on the government side and no representative in the cabinet. Of this, however, there is little chance, though it is stated the constituency will be raided by heelers from this city and New Westminster. The nomination takes place on the 17th and polling on the 24th. Mr. Martin's claims on the position are well known, and that he will make a capital administrative officer few will deny. His majority, should he be opposed, will be of such a character as to fully demonstrate his influence and the desire of the electorate to be heard in the government of the province." This sort of talk seems a little bit childish. It is the mission of an opposition to oppose, and there is no obligation on their part to refrain at any particular time. For our own part we should be quite content to see the rule abolished which requires a newly appointed minister to go before his constituents, but while the rule obtains there is no fault to be found with anybody who takes advantage of it.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Toronto Mail says: "Mr. Fraser, M. P., who along with Mr. Laurier has been denouncing monopolies in the west, admitted last session that he is a shareholder in the glass combine, and regularly draws his dividend. It is because people are willing to put their money into such enterprises that they exist. Perhaps some of the stones the member for Guysboro' has been throwing will demolish his glass house." The Mail poses as a strictly non-partisan and therefore strictly impartial newspaper, but this paragraph shows that it can be quite as unfair as any party journal of the baser sort. Mr. Fraser has many times expressed not only willingness but anxiety to have the conditions removed which make such combines possible. If he is ready to sacrifice his dividends in the interests of the people generally he deserves praise instead of a sneer. There are very few of the protectionist sort who would follow his example.

Instead of dealing with the Empire as one of those offending Canadians who are ready to run down the mother country in the hope of making a political point for its party the Colonist follows its example. That is about as close to consistency as our amusing neighbor usually comes. There is some satisfaction, however, in seeing that it has in running away from its duty stumbled on an important economic truth which its party studiously ignores, namely, that "the experience of nations is proving that neither free trade nor protection can secure complete and permanent prosperity. No matter what the commercial policy of a country is its trade is liable to fluctuations and some of its interests are forced to undergo serious vicissitudes." Canadians have repeatedly been told by Conservative politicians and papers that protection would "ensure complete and permanent prosperity," and in former days the people were foolish enough to accept this as the truth. They know better now, and they moreover perceive how dishonest and untruthful the preachers of this doctrine are.

ARTIFICIAL RUBIES.

The Manufacture of the Gems Has Reached a Successful Stage.

Artificial rubies have already reached a stage of successful manufacture which causes these gems to be considered with caution in the trade. Artificial sapphires and emeralds of any size are less common, because natural stones of these kinds are less valuable, and the reward for their successful creation is not so great. The synthetic pearl is being so steadily perfected in the laboratories of France, Germany and Switzerland, that before long the ordinary buyer will have to trust entirely to the integrity of the jeweler, since he will be totally unable to distinguish the chemical from the natural gem. Last of all, the diamond, after baffling chemists for centuries, has succumbed to the persistent efforts of a clever young Frenchman, for the reports which came from Paris last year are all true and the Moissan artificial diamonds are pure, limpid and unmistakeable stones of their kind. The jewelers have many questions to answer from anxious clients, who were under the impression that diamonds are already being manufactured as easily as optical glass and turned out in sizes and quantities to suit the newest millionaire. This is in no sense true, though there is no means of telling how soon it may be true. The most difficult part of the work has been done, and the time has now come for improvements and subsidiary inventions, so that the future of diamond making as an art and as an industry can only be inferred from the analogous advance in ruby making since the first creation of the artificial ruby.

The first artificial rubies—and it should be remembered that synthesis deals only with the actual stones and not with faced gems, doublets or pastes—were successfully made by chemical processes as long ago as 1847. Rubies, sapphires and emeralds are differently colored examples of the same chemical compound, corundum; and the corundum is the oxide of alumina, which is so widely distributed over the earth as an important constituent of ordinary clay. Like the artificial diamonds of to-day the first chemical rubies were very small and commercially insignificant, and many years of subsequent attempts, lasting from 1847 to 1877, failed to increase to any appreciable degree the size of the stones obtained. Twenty different chemical processes between the years named were found by which chemists could obtain and crystallize corundum into pure rubies, and these included in their scope all the compounds from which the oxide of alumina could be reduced, and all there agents which could be used to this end. Various pressures were tried, including the use of superheated steam at various stages of expansion, and the temperature employed varied from 160 to 600 degrees centigrade. No marked advance was recorded, however, until 1877. Messrs. Fremy and Fell, two eminent French chemists, heated aluminate of lead with silica and obtained silicate of lead and free alumina in crystalline form. This process gave them rubies in quantity and of promising size. Not long afterward Fremy, who is the father of the artificial ruby of to-day, obtained even better results by treating amorphous alumina with barium fluoride at a red heat, and by this discovery set artificial ruby making on its feet.—Boston Transcript.

FELL OVER A CLIFF.

An English Lady's Misadventure in Banff National Park.

The Ottawa Free Press has the following: 'Three months ago the Free Press noticed the arrival of Miss Nellie Gladstone from London, England, but formerly of Ottawa, on a visit to her cousin, Miss Alma Rosecrans, Daly avenue, and other friends here as well as relatives, who were stopping at the Russell on tour. Miss Gladstone, who is a noted botanist and conchologist, and who also studies geology, her writings on these subjects in English periodicals being much appreciated, when here resolved to join a touring party of European and American ladies and gentlemen who were leaving for the Rockies. By some re-arrangement the party got split up in Winnipeg, and afterwards more so in Regina, until only three were left, including Miss Gladstone, the latter being determined to go fern-hunting in the Rockies despite all obstacles. It is from this point that sad news comes to hand. A letter to Miss Rosecrans gives full details. The trio had arrived at Banff, N. W. T., and after a night's rest resolved to explore the national park for specimens of Alpine flora said to be found there. Miss Gladstone, who is credited with possessing too much daring, got separated from her companions who, accustomed to her acts in that way, thought little of it and returned to their rooms. Next morning the alarm was raised that Miss Gladstone had not returned home all night. A search party started from the point where she was last seen and followed the direction she was then taking. Hours passed without result until well on in the afternoon a boy of the party found an inanimate heap at the foot of a cliff or bluff, the evidences surrounding it telling their own tale of daring and disaster. Miss Gladstone had apparently been leaning over the rock to secure a specimen when she rolled over. She was taken up for dead and conveyed to the first rude shelter a long way off. There it was found both legs were broken, the right arm twisted in the shoulder joint, and a huge gash cut on the forehead, which fortunately the overnight frost had congealed, and thus saved the loss of blood, and, as it turned out, saved her life for the time being at least. Restoratives of the handiest kind were applied, and, after a great deal of labor, she opened her eyes but was still unconscious. Two days passed like this when delirium set in. It is impossible to move her and the worst fears are entertained. Word has been sent to her friends in Ottawa, Philadelphia and London, but gives no hope whatever. A point which at first raised suspicion was the fact that her specimen satchel which she continually carried, could not be found anywhere and foul play was spoken of, but the evidences of accident are too plain, and an examination of the plants she was still grasping shows that it is the stem of a root growing out of the face of the cliff over which she fell."

IN NEED OF A PENSION.

The Man Who Discovered Diamonds in South Africa.

The Cape government is contemplating the bestowal of a pension upon the man who found the first diamond in that colony. The following account is taken from the Pall Mall Budget:

"In the year 1866, Lennard Jacobs, a Korannah, was led by a report that a German missionary, named Kallenberg, had settled in Peniel (now known as Barkly), to 'trek' thither in search of religious instruction. After remaining at Peniel for some months he became dissatisfied, and resolved to return to his kraal, but was dissuaded by Mr. Kallenberg, who pointed out to him the advantages of remaining within touch of a Christian mission. He also added to his persuasion that he had read that geologists in the old country had expressed opinion that South Africa should prove diamondiferous. It was just possible that while tilling the ground he might discover one of these valuable stones.

"Jacobs, who had never before heard of a diamond, asked what it was, and how to be distinguished; whereupon Mr. Kallenberg told him that, if he found a stone bright and shining, like glass, which withstood the fire while his pulse beat five times or more, he might conclude it was a diamond; while, on the other hand, if it popped in the ashes, it was a crystal, and valueless.

"'Why,' said Lennard, 'my children have many bright stones such as you speak of, and when I go home I will put them in the fire.'

"On his return to his little farm, remembering the missionary's instructions, he placed several bright stones, which his children had collected, in the fire, but all popped with the exception of one, which seemed impervious to the heat, so he put it aside to take to Mr. Kallenberg when next he visited the mission.

"Some months elapsed, when one day, on preparing to go into Peniel, he remembered the bright stone, and asked his daughter for it, who told him that only the previous day she had exchanged it with a trader for some calico and wire.

"At this the shrewd old Korannah concluded that the stone must have some value, or the trader would not have given the goods in exchange for it.

"He therefore went to the field Cornet of the district, who, hearing his story, agreed to ride out with him to find the trader.

"They accordingly started, and encountered him some miles off, where he owned to having received the stone, but said that it was of no value he had thrown it away; being pressed, he, at length, reluctantly produced the stone.

"Jacobs, rejoiced at its recovery, but still uncertain as to its value, repaired at once to the mission, where he found, much to his chagrin, that Mr. Kallenberg had been transferred to Bethany, but that his assistant, the Rev. Adam Zermott was there, and to him he showed the stone.

"Mr. Zermott told him that he knew nothing of such matters, but referred him to Mr. Godfrey Radloff, the storekeeper.

"He, however, would advance nothing on it, but arranged to send it to a relative of his at Colesburg, who in turn, sent it to a friend at Grahamstown, and the latter forwarded it to Port Elizabeth, where Sir Philip Wodehouse, the governor, hearing of the stone, caused it to be examined by an Amsterdam expert, who pronounced it a genuine diamond.

"Sir Philip thereupon purchased it for £500, naming it the 'Star of South Africa,' and it still remains in his family.

"Lennard Jacobs finally, after the lapse of two years, received from Godfrey Radloff a horse, wagon, some sheep, and a little money, the exact amount of which he does not recollect.

"He is 78 years old, and was perfectly well and strong on the occasion of his first, and probably the last, time of his ever being photographed."

WOMEN AS GOOD BORROWERS.

Female Stockholders in a Chicago Building and Loan Association.

There is a Chicago building and loan association which has great faith in women borrowers. Running over an experience of eight years the association has not lost a cent from its female stockholders, and the secretary is firmly of the opinion that when a woman starts out to secure a home she does not cease her efforts until she gets it. The firt loan the association made to a woman was on a lot out at Thirty-first and Wallace streets. It was in the nature of an experiment, and some of the officers thought it bad policy, but the woman stated the case this way: "We are paying $10 a month rent, and know we could just as well pay that amount towards the purchase of a home." She succeeded in getting $750, with which the association put up a brick cottage on her lot. Since that time she has added another story to the building, and a payment has never been missed.

"I have observed," said the secretary, "that a woman after a home if she has a good husband manages to economize in such a way that she forms the best kind of a borrower. We had one once who fell behind several months, but she kept continually coming to the office and declaring that she would come out all right, and she did. That has been my experience with all the women to whom we have loaned money."

VENTILATION.

One Method That May Possibly Suit Fresh-Air Cranks.

One of the greatest difficulties met with in ventilating public buildings and railway cars is to settle the question of how much air shall be admitted or how often the entire cubic contents of an apartment shall be renewed. This from the fact that in the quantity of air required individuals vary greatly. To some the whole ocean of the atmosphere is inadequate, and they do not feel even comfortable unless a Niagara of air is pouring over them.

This is the fresh-air fiend, male or female, who opens the car window and swallows dust and cinders, and makes others do the same, for the sake of satisfying their craving. Behind sits, doubtless, a person to whom the least breath of air in motion is a calamity, yet both of them must make the journey in company. One has just as much right as the other to his views of what is desirable to him, and neither is called upon to give way to the other; one smothers, and the other feels that he or she is about to be blown out of the car.

The only compromise that we can think of that would answer and make ventilation of public rooms a success, is to provide an automatic system which shall be variable in different parts of the same room. These parts should be supplied with traps in the floor, and have, say, a six-second fanblower beneath each trap, and be accessible only to fresh-air fiends of both sexes.

In the other parts a dead-air space, approaching a vacum, should be maintained, into which a little sulphure of hydrogen should be injected periodically, in order to maintain all the phenomena of bad ventilation for persons of infirm health who are compelled to travel. Then everyone would be satisfied—if the plan worked.—The Engineer.

—The public is becoming a little sceptical about waterproofed goods, whether for men or women. Claims have been made which were never substantiated. And at the very best they had a waterproofed look about them which was too often embarrassing. It is the distinguishing merit of Priestley's Cravenettes that they are precisely like the same goods not waterproofed. They are absolutely rain proof and yet porous, though there is nothing to show the rain repelling quality. Priestley's trade mark, "The Varnished Board," will always be found on these goods.

—"The Fast Mail," which appears at the Victoria theatre this and to-morrow evenings is said to be the most successful railroad and scenic drama on the road this season. Mr. J. L. Carter, the author and manager, has contrived to weave into a consistent story nearly all the good points of the sensational drama which tradition has handed down, adding thereto the most ingenious mechanical effects of the day. Observing the drawing qualities of a tank of "real" water, a fire engine with "real" horses, and a fight between "real" pugilists, Mr. Carter has determined to combine into a single piece as many similar attractions as could well be crowded together. It must not be inferred that Mr. Carter has appropriated anything. The dialogue is said to be bright and clean and the company well trained, making the piece go with a vim. There will be a special children's matinee tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock. Patrons are advised to get tickets [illegible] Jamieson's store, where they will be sold up to one o'clock to-morrow, and thus avoid the rush at the theatre box office. —The old dispute as to the responsibility of Captain Sawyer of the bark Orpheus for the loss of life by the sinking of the steamer Pacific has been revived by the death of that gentleman. The day after Captain Sawyer's death, which occurred at Port Townsend last week, a story was published dealing very severely with the dead captain, charging him with having run away from the wreck of the Pacific knowing that she was sinking. Several of the sound papers have now come to the defence of the captain, and publish the statement made by the captain and crew shortly after their arrival at Port Townsend. It is now stated that Captain Sawyer after the collision thought that his bark was injured more than the steamer and thought that the Pacific had run away from him. The Orpheus went ashore on Vancouver island while the captain was asleep, and it was several days later before he heard of the loss of the Pacific and the three hundred persons who were on board of her. —There was a real nice case ventilated in police court this morning. Sidney Hooper and J. Lengre were rivals for the affections of a frail creature. Hooper got the girl, but in the encounter which he had with his rival he called him some vile names. He was tried in police court this morning on a charge brought under the public morals by-law, and convicted. The girl took the stand and endeavored to clear the accused. —This is an age of record breaking. Magistrate Macrae this morning disposed of 16 cases in police court in 35 minutes. Three of the Indians failed to appear, and their bail, which was ten dollars in each case, was declared forfeited. The other five Indians were fined $5 apiece and Chalk was sent to jail for three days. Four Indians who had whiskey in their possession, were fined $25 apiece. John Wagner alias Lager Beer Johnnie, was convicted on two counts of supplying liquor to Indians and will serve two months in jail. The charge [illegible] against Ah Sing was withdrawn.

—The local fire underwriters held their annual meeting yesterday evening, J. C. Maclure (Robert Ward & Co., Limited), in the chair. The losses for the year ending October 1st, 1894, amounted to $58,586.61, or 58 per cent. of the premium income, which with the city tax of $300, equalling ten per cent. for maintaining the fire department, and the expenses, 32 per cent., made the year, according to insurance men, an unprofitable one. This leaves out the 40 per cent. for reserve or reinsurance. It was decided to raise the rates, outside of the old city limits and within the new limits, 12 1-2 per cent. on frame buildings and 25 per cent. on frame stores. Some of the members wanted to raise the insurance inside the old limits on account of the $300 tax levied by the city as the companies' share for maintaining the fire department. A committee was appointed to act upon Mr. McMicking's specifications for wiring buildings. The executive for the year was elected as follows: H. F. Heisterman, J. C. Maclure, Richard Hall, J. St. Clair Blackett and R. S. Day. J. G. Elliott was reappointed secretary-treasurer and inspector.

TOSSED BY A BULL.

John Sinclair of Cadboro Bay the Victim of a Mad Bull.

John Sinclair, farmer, of Cadboro bay, is lying in a rather critical condition at his home, suffering from what the doctors technically term a broken neck, but which fortunately is not as serious as a broken neck as understood by a layman. Yesterday afternoon Mr. Sinclair went to the pasture to drive in a young bull. The bull charged at him, but for a time he was able to keep it at bay with a pitchfork which he carried. Finally, however, he was tossed, according to Mr. Ohlsen, who was present, nearly ten feet in the air. He fell on the back of his neck, breaking a small bone that protects the spinal cord. He was completely paralyzed when picked up, but soon regained consciousness. Dr. Ernest Hall was called in and made [illegible] as comfortable as possible. He says Mr. Sinclair may live if inflammation does not set in. Besides the broken bone, Mr. Sinclair's back, where the bull struck him, was badly bruised.

The bull has been a terror to the neighborhood for some time. Only a few days ago he tossed a Chinaman in the air, and this morning he came within an ace of goring a boy. The bull was destroyed this afternoon.

Now is the Time for a trip. Take the Islander for River's Inlet on Sunday night.

THE ART OF TENNYSON.

Fourth Lecture Delivered at St. Ann's Academy Yesterday Afternoon.

Mrs. Watt yesterday lectured on "The Art of Tennyson." She pointed out that Tennyson and Browning deal with common themes in different ways. Tennyson idealizes. Browning redeems from ugliness by beauty of character or usefulness. Tennyson's poetic birth came at the age of five years and the "voice" he then heard "speaking in the wind" he heard with ear last day of his life. His high ideal of poetry, as high in youth as it was fresh in old age, made him a master of the art. There are no mistakes in his work and he has bequeathed models of pure English. His skill in workmanship akin to Milton's, his treatment of men and women is unique. It is not character sketching but a series of abstract ideas personified. The "Blameless King" was a shadow man. With Wordsworth he makes the human story a background for nature's descriptions, but unlike Wordsworth these descriptions are a series of pleasing pictures rather than recognizable descriptions. His work is mature. In most of it there is perfect union between the thoughts and his words. With Mrs. Browning and Shelly he has made music in this age's poetry. With Matthew Arnold he has corrected and pruned and polished until the results are unsurpassed in poetic excellence.

A rare opportunity for a few days. Next Sunday S.S. Islander will leave for River's Inlet on Sunday night. Fare for round trip, $10.

And good savings, too, if you remember that Partridge of the Lansdowne House, 86 Yates street, is selling his capes, jackets, ulsters and waterproofs at reduced prices as he needs the room for the millinery department now in charge of Miss E. J. Duffie, late of the Stanley House.

Mr. T. E. Wiley, 146 Chambers street, New York, says that Ayer's Sarsaparilla cured him of a dry and scaly humor, from which he had suffered intolerably. He adds, "I have not now a blemish on my body, [illegible] Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

CLEWS' REPORT.

Financial Review for the Week Ending October 6th.

New York, Oct. 6.—During the past week Wall Street has shown no new features of interest. Speculation continues to centre largely in the industrials, being encouraged by the unsettled condition of the finances of certain of the trusts, while railroad shares have been comparatively neglected. The class of large operators remain comparatively passive, and show no objection to the "bears" disporting themselves in making petty raids; first because their attacks make little impression, and next because any fall in prices they may effect only affords an opportunity for advantageous buying, which the "bulls" seem quite ready to turn to account.

Although there is at present nothing out of which to make a really active market, yet in certain important respects the position amounts to a "bull" situation. For, although the business of the railroads has not yet returned to its usual volume, yet it is still recovering and there is a large volume of freight in prospect for the coming months, and the range of prices is low enough to amply set off the current relatively low earnings. Besides, the amount of floating stock on the market is very exceptionally light. This is remarked by the banks, who are receiving an unusually large proportion of bonds in their collaterals (perhaps as a set-off against rattle-trap industrials), and a much smaller ratio of railroad stocks. The same fact is apparent from the difficulty experienced by the "bears" in borrowing stocks and the frequent squeezes to which the are submitted. This scarcely is naturally an element of strength; and still more so is the extraordinary facility with which money can be borrowed on time. Moreover, there is nothing in sight to suggest an early change from this abundance of money. These factors favor the "bulls" as against the "bears;" and it would not be surprising if the latter soon changed sides, so as to produce a range of prices on which they could sell to better purpose.

Pending the dullness of the local market, there is more than usual interest in the disposition shown towards our securities at the foreign centres. Abroad, the excessive ease in money is encouraging to speculative transactions, and prices, although already high for the better class of investments, are steadily rising. In London, the speculative spirit is encouraging the launching of new corporate undertakings. The amount of new "capital applications" averages over £1,000,000 per week, and for the first nine months of the year aggregated close upon £50,000,000 against £33,000,000 for the same months of 1893. This, it is true, is much below the usual rate of new London issues; but it shows a quite distinct revival of enterprise and investment. The home trade of England also exhibits a reviving tone, with a strengthening tendency in prices. The marked recovery of confidence throughout Europe in the maintenance of pacific international policies seems to be somewhat checked by the reported serious condition of the czar's health; but it is not easy to see why that should not rather benefit new world investments than otherwise. Judging from the tone of the London press, the feeling of distrust towards American securities, occasioned by the current numerous railroad receiverships, has begun to abate. There is more disposition to buy our securities, but transactions show a preference for better class of stocks and for bonds. As the traffic of our roads improves and our general trade recovers, this movement may easily extend to the more active shares and become the basis of something like the former speculative movement between New York and London. The present unsettled condition of politics in this country no doubt has some effect upon those of our investments which rank below the position of absolute security; but the history of our legislation affords so many evidences of a common sense result coming out of erratic ferments of public opinion, that London financiers should know how to take our present surface currents of political sentiment at their true value.

The recovery of trade following the passage of the tariff act appears to have exhausted its first effects on Wall street. The two months of active distribution of merchandise has sufficed to meet the immediate wants of retail trade, and there is consequently a curtailment of the demand at wholesale and an interval of waiting until the usual second demand for replenishing stock appears. There appears, however, to be no real reason for doubting that this second half of the season will prove reasonably satisfactory. The retailers themselves were the best judges of what amount of goods they could dispose of, and it is reasonable to suppose that, liberal though their purchases have been, they have taken no more than their customers will want during the first and more active part of the season; and, assuming that, it may be allowable to hope for a fair renewal of demand during the later period of the season. Wholesale dealers, however, are making conservative estimates upon this late demand, and are pursuing a tentative course in their contracts with the manufacturers. They are likely to follow a like policy in respect to orders for the next season's business; which is no more than would be dictated by sound business policy. Indeed, there is nowhere any disposition to discount the future from the stand point of sanguine expectations. A continued gradual recovery of business through 1895 is counted upon, but no early "boom" is generally anticipated. The imports of merchandise show a large increase, being for the last week of September $10,200,000, against $6,200,000 for the same time of 1893. This may be regarded as partly the effect of the revival of business, and partly a reaction from the holding back of goods in anticipation of the new duties. The movement is therefore not be regarded as in any way excessive.

MR. MEREDITH TALKS.

He Dwells Reminiscently Upon His Political Career.

William Ralph Meredith, the chief justice of the court of common pleas of Ontario, sat in the library of his home in Rosedale last night when a reporter of the Globe brought before his notice a dispatch from Ottawa containing the announcement of his appointment to the chief justiceship, and ventured congratulations.

"No, I had not received official notice," said Mr. Meredith, "although I knew that the cabinet was in session this afternoon."

Then, after motioning his visitor to a chair, Mr. Meredith drew his hand through his hair, in the fashion that visitors to the legislature will remember, gave his mane a shake, and began to puff philosophically at a long wooden pipe, suggestive of Washington Irving's Knickerbocker friends. Mr. Meredith is leonine in aspect, but in repose, with the gleam of the firelight on his face, with his book friends on the shelves around him, and with the curling smoke clouding the atmosphere, he is judicial and reflective. Looking at him thus one can readily understand why his followers in the house have always had so strong an affection for him. He is five and fifty, and his hair, which was grey a while ago, is beginning to turn white. But the face is as strong and masterful as ever, and the rugged, athletic frame gives promise of almost as long service on the bench as in the halls of the legislature.

By-and-bye as the smoke thickens he talks, and, naturally enough, on this first night of his removal from political life, it is to the political field that the conversation turns.

"I have been in the legislature for over twenty-two years," he says, "and I believe that, with the exception of Tom Gibson of Huron I am the oldest member of it. Baxter came in when the first provincial election was held, and Gibson at the second. I came in with Sir Oliver Mowat at the bye-elections of 1873, when Blake, Mackenzie and the other federal leaders went out. Perry resigned his place in Oxford for Mowat, and Carling for me. I was elected, however, before Mowat. Let me see."

Here a copy of the journals of the house was brought down from its place and consulted.

"Yes, the writ for my election was dated August 1, and that for Mowat on November 18. Of course we were both sworn in as members on the same day.

"Mr. Fraser came in afterwards, and Hardy did not come, I think, till 1874. Of the members of the opposition I have seen three generations. Mr. Whitney came in on a bye-election, and has yet scarcely completed his full second term. Mr. Marter is entering on his third term, and is, I believe, about the oldest member on the opposition side, except Mr. Kerns.

"When I first went in we had not Waters and the ditches and water courses, but we had D. D. Calvin, who was always at the assessment laws. Albert Prince was rather an eccentric member, but Jim Metcalfe was the first real wag that we had."

Then Mr. Meredith talked of the personal qualities of members whose speeches he listened to in the legislature, when confederation was but six years old and the Dominion was still a strange word in the ears of the people. Of the political situation he spoke thus:

"I see some of the papers are weaving a story of startling political changes from my withdrawal. There is nothing in the stories, and no changes of policy are bound up in my retirement. It simply means that a man in active business, as I have been, cannot give the time necessary to politics. The new leader will be chosen by the members of the opposition in the house. As to who my successor will be of course I have nothing to say.

"The city's business will need attention till a new counsel can be chosen, and I will try to make satisfactory arrangements for this. I thought at first when I went in that I could clean up the arrears and have time to do outside work, but my experience leads to the conclusion that the city should have the undivided attention of a good solicitor."

More he said, but not for the public ear, but this much is certain: When he steps upon the bench Mr. Meredith bids farewell to political life, and a new order of things begins in the politics of the province.

"A sort of obituary this," he said, when the interview ended.

"Yes," was the reply, "but there is always the satisfaction of reading this sort."—Toronto Globe.

A Great Feature

Of Hood's Sarsaparilla is that while it purifies the blood and sends it coursing through the veins full of richness and health, it also imparts new life and vigor to every function of the body. Hence the expression so often heard: "Hood's Sarsaparilla made a new person of me." It overcomes that tired feeling so common now.

Franz Neumann is the oldest university professor in Germany. He was ninety-six years old on September 11, and has been lecturing steadily at the Konigsberg University for the last sixty-six years, his subject being physics and mineralogy.

The Westminster Gazette calls attention to the fact, upon the authority of Consul-General Patrick Collins, that negroes are flocking to England in great numbers. The steamship companies confirm Mr. Collins' statements, and add that nearly all the colored wealthy folks are sending their sons to study law, art or medicine in London. Most of the people are West Indian negroes and not Afro-Americans. The wealthy Afro-Americans send their sons to be educated at Oberlin, Yale, and Harvard, and only in isolated cases do they send them to England.

"Only the Scars Remain,"

"Among the many testimonials which I see in regard to certain medicines performing cures, cleansing the blood, etc., none impress me more than my own case. Twenty years ago, at the age of 18 years, I had swellings come on my legs, which broke and became running sores. Our family physician could do me no good, and it was feared that the bones would be affected. At last, my good old to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I took three bottles, the sores healed, and I have not been troubled since. Only the scars remain, and the memory of the past, to remind me of the good Ayer's Sarsaparilla has done me. I now weigh two hundred and twenty pounds, and am in the best of health. I have been on the road for the past twelve years, have noticed Ayer's Sarsaparilla advertised in all parts of the United States, and always take pleasure in telling what good it did for me."

Mother Urged Me

THE AUSTRALIAN TICK.

An Insect Capable of Causing Much Annoyance.

Campers and botanists in Canada may be annoyed by the mosquito, but he is innocence itself compared with the Australian tick. A correspondent writes to the Sydney Morning Herald: On each of three visits I have made recently to the bush I have unwittingly brought home with me specimens of these pests. One was industriously boring into the ear of my little daughter before its presence was noticed, and it had become half hidden before the irritation which it set up led to its being dislodged. A second fastened on to the back of the hand of my wife and a third fastened on to my hand, and in each case inflammation had set in as the result of the boring of the insect. All three specimens were minute black objects resembling splinters of wood. On Saturday after returnig from a visit to the bush I discovered an altogether different specimen of the tick, which had commenced operations on my head and at the back of my ear. This fellow had so firmly attached himself to my skin that it was necessary to use force to remove him. He was of light brown, was of the shape and about the same size as the common house bug, and his legs were armed with barbs, which fully accounted for the tenacity which he possessed. I narrate my experiences for the sake of putting visitors, and especially children, upon their guard against the venomous tick, so that at the first indication of the peculiar irritation it sets up the insect may be dislodged. I make it a rule to have in a handy place a pair of tweezers and a phial of common turpentine. With the oil I saturate the "selection" which has been taken up by the tick—turpentine destroys the tick and is an antidote to the venom—and the tweezers I used to drag out the trespasser. Should a dog be attacked by ticks he sometimes suffers from paralysis of the parts attacked by the insects.

ENCOURAGING FACTS.

Significant School and Prison Statistics From England.

"Full schools mean empty prisons" is the motto of the writer of an article in the current number of the Schoolmaster and it [illegible] that the array of facts and figures with which he furnishes his readers yields abundant support to this eminently encouraging doctrine. Far and wide we can see, nay, cannot if we would help seeing, that our prisons are, to a considerable extent, disappearing, their sites being for the most part taken for the erection of model lodging houses for the poorer classes. The gaols have failed," as some one has tersely put it, "for want of adequate support from the criminal classes," and it is significant that they began to be in a bad way when the School Board Act came into active operation, and have gone on declining step by step as the number of children on the roll of the primary schools has increased. In 1870, with a population under 23,000,000, we had in England and Wales 12,000 primary schools. Then the number of prisons reached 113. In 1890 the population had increased to nearly 26,000,000, and the primary schools to 29,000, while the number of prisons had fallen to less than 60. Roughly speaking, while the number of children in the primary schools had increased in the period referred to about threefold, the number of thieves or suspected persons on the roll of the police records had diminished by nearly one-third, and this in the face of a large increase in the population. Well may the writer ask, who in 1870 would not have looked on the man as a dreamer who had ventured to predict that, in "the short space of a quarter of a century, within a radius of little more than a mile from Westminster palace, gaols would be transformed into play places for the worker's children; into art palaces for the improvement of the worker's leisure; or into schools for the worker's little ones?

THE ACT OF UNION.

Adam Smith's Explanation of the Disaffection in Scotland.

In the introduction to the catalogue Mr. Bonar furnishes a fac simile of a long letter from the illustrious author of "The Wealth of Nations," which is interesting from its remarks on the causes of Scottish Jacobitism in the eighteenth century. Smith attributes it to disaffection with the act of union. The letter is dated Glasgow, 4th of April, 1760. After alluding to Col. Hoke's "Secret History of his Negotiations in Scotland in Favor of the Pretender," which had just then made its appearance, "as likely to throw a damp on the militia," Smith adds: "Nothing, however, appears to me more excusable than the disaffection of Scotland at that time. . . The immediate effect of it was to hurt the interests of every single order of men in the country. The dignity of the nobility was undone by it; the greater part of the gentry who had been accustomed to represent their own country in its own parliament, were cut off forever from all hopes of representing it in a British parliament. Even the merchants seemed to suffer at first. The trade to the plantations was indeed open to them; but that was a trade which they knew nothing about. The trade they were acquainted with--that to France, Holland and the Baltic--was laid under new embarrassments which almost annihilated the two first and most important branches of it. The clergy, too, who were then far from insignificant, were then alarmed about the church. No wonder if at that time all orders of men conspired in cursing a measure hurtful to their immediate interests."

—The September number of the Canadian Shorthand Review, just to hand, shows the mark of improvement that has been visible in this much needed publication since its inception. It contains several photographs, including one of Mayor Warring Kennedy of Toronto, and a number of well written, newsy articles, of interest and advantage to both the professional shorthand man and the student.

—The bartender of the Telegraph Hotel has taken offence at what was published respecting his connection with the case of Frank Miller alias Lewis the forger. The bartender says that when Lewis was at the house he showed him a Masonic receipt made out in the name of George Thompson, and also a letter of recommendation. Miller, or whatever his name is, remained there but one night. When the man was pointed out to him on the boat he could not swear to his identity, although the man looked like Miller.

—John Jessop, one of the lay delegates to the general conference of the Methodist church recently held at London, Ontario, spoke on the subject of the conference at Metropolitan Methodist church last evening. The speaker conveyed to the audience the greetings of Rev. J. E. Starr and A. E. Russ, well known to Victorians. He told of the vast amount of routine work and committee work done at the conference. He criticized the action of the conference in retaining the clause of the discipline which prohibits the "putting on of gold or costly apparel." He said he was glad the ministerial term had been extended from three to five years, as it would permit them to retain their own pastor that much longer. He told of the defeat of the plan to unite British Columbia and Alberta for conference purposes. He announced that Rev. A. C. Courtice had been made editor of the Christian Guardian and that the price of the paper had been reduced from $2 to $1. He paid a high tribute to Rev. Dr. Carman, who was re-elected to the general superintendency. The latter's executive ability was greatly felt in the conference.

The editor of this great paper is away on a wheeling tour. We don't know when he will be back, but we are equal to all emergency. We can write a poem, discuss the tariff, umpire a game of ball, report a wedding, saw wood, beat a lawyer, describe a fire so that the people will shred their wraps, make a dollar do the work of ten, shine at soirees, address the horticultural society, test whiskey, subscribe to charity, go without meals, attack the N. If you don't see what you want, ask for it.—Uxbridge, Ont., Journal.

UNION RAILROADERS.

Can Men Be Discharged For Joining the Union?

Philadelphia, Oct. 12.—The case of the Order of Railway Trainmen against the Reading road to enjoin it from discharging certain employes was up in the circuit court to-day. A petition has been presented to the court by Brakeman Hicks, alleging that the road is discharging men for belonging to the union. The Reading officials answered that they could not find Hicks' application, and therefore could not state whether he agreed to belong to any labor union or not. He would be retained while he obeyed the rules of the road. This settled the Hicks case, and an effort was made to introduce testimony that the Reading officials were coercing men to leave the order, but the court ruled the matter would have to come up on separate petitions.

THE RENT WAS NOT RAISED.

A Woman Who Showed Herself Too Smart for Her Landlord.

They met in a street car and the woman with the golf cape remarked:

"I see you still have the same house."

"Yes, and at the same rent," remarked the woman with the ostrich boa.

"But I thought your landlord had decided to raise it?"

"He did, but somehow I didn't expect to move, though Tom gave up the house at once. You see, I really can't afford to have any more bric-a-brac smashed in moving wagons. I've lost enough already to stock a department store."

"So you decided not to move?"

"Not quite, dear. You see, I told the landlord that I was sorry to move, but we really couldn't afford a higher rent and that I myself would gladly show the house to intending tenants. Then I set every room in order and waited."

"Well?"

"Well, I really thought that the first woman who came would take it. I praised the closets and told her what swell neighbors we had and—"

"But I thought you didn't want to—"

"No, dear. But just as she was leaving I casually mentioned the fact that two persons had died of typhoid fever in the next house above and one two doors below, she seemed somewhat agitated, and when I called out the landlord's address after her she didn't seem much interested."

"But, Maggie, you know that was—"

"Some time ago? Yes, but I never could remember dates, and the people did die."

"Well, did she—"

"Never went near. The bed rooms were too small for the next people, and the next ones were delighted, but thought the rent rather dear. Then I remarked that immediately after luncheon I intended to run around and engage that lively little house in the next square at a lower rent. They carelessly asked which house, and I noticed that they turned that corner."

"How could you?"

"Well, did she—"

"Well, you know, it was cheaper, and if they had taken our house I should have been obliged to rent that, for it was near enough to have my bric-a-brac carried."

"Your landlord told me that Swellstyles intended to take it."

"They did, but after Mrs. Swellstyles and I had gone all over it I said: 'Your children look so healthy that I think the house will just suit you, but mine, you know, are rather delicate, and the least hint of sewer gas alarms us.' She turned pale, and I knew at once not even the parlor mantel would induce her to take it."

"And the landlord?"

"Oh, he came around that evening and [illegible] we were such good tenants, he had decided not to raise the rent. Tom was so surprised."

"No wonder!" gasped her friend; "this is our stopping place; come and have a cream soda—I feel faint."—Chicago Tribune.

GRUESOME PHOTOGRAPHY.

Surgical Operation Picturing Done by a New York Man.

Oscar G. Mason is the most expert hospital photographer in the country, and a photographer for fun. He may be found six days out the seven in the skylight of Bellevue hospital. A vacation he would consider a flippant thing, suited to young boys and women who have nothing to do. He has a New England face and a patriarchal beard, and has held his position for a quarter of a century. Photography is a hobby, an art and a joy forever with him.

Although he gives Bellevue the distinction of being the only hospital in the country which has a photographer of its own, he has never been paid a penny for his services. He never asked for remuneration, and if it were offered to him he would refuse.

Mr. Mason was once as great an expert in astronomical photography as he is now in surgical photography. He began the study of that while he was head photographer for some of the big studios uptown. Then he devoted all his time for a while until one day he got a divorce from the old hobby and took on a new one—the photographing of surgical operations and hospital scenes. He went to the Bellevue authorities and they agreed to give him a nest up in the skylight, where he and his strange instruments might live in the seclusion as long as he desired.

He hadn't been in the hospital long when he thought it would be a good plan to photograph all of the unindentified bodies at the morgue. Since 1868 he has photographed the face of every arrival at the death chamber down at the river front. Sometimes, after two or three years have passed, relatives of the unfortunate have found out how a friend disappeared by seeing his features upon one of the grewsome cards in the cabinet which is kept in the morgue office.

When an eminent surgeon wants some pictures of an operation for a medical work he goes to Mr. Mason, who has been so long in his present occupation that he is something of a surgeon himself. The most wonderful portraits of the brain ever made were done by him. It is quite impossible for a layman to appreciate the difficulties which he has to encounter making photographs of an operation. Blood is the hardest thing to photograph realistically. The picture for the surgeon must show everything in a manner as true to the real as possible, so that other surgeons and students may understand the case by looking at the picture. There is little time for posing when a patient is under the knife, and the skill of the photographer must be the skill of deftness and not of deliberation.

To accomplish all of these things has been the constant study for a quarter of a century of the portly, white-haired old gentleman, who is always very busy, always good-natured, and receives scores of medical bigwigs in his skylight studio. Just how such a genial old gentleman with such a twinkle in his eye can take delight in so gruesome an occupation, when he might make a great success, and money as well, taking pictures of good-looking and well-dressed persons, is a wonder to the surgeons themselves. Doubtless if Mr. Mason had become a writer of fiction instead of a photographer he would have been a realist of a drier stamp than Zola.—New York Press.

A GIGANTIC ELEVATOR.

New Employment Proposed for the Ferris Wheel.

The Ferris wheel has been a sort of a white elephant on the hands of the owners ever since the World's Fair. It paid very well there, but since they have not known what to do with it. It is now proposed to take it to New York and turn it into a sort of gigantic elevator to carry people to the roof garden and skating rink, which will be the highest in the world. The plan is to erect the wheel as it stood in Chicago. Outside of the wheel and trellis work will be four steel columns. These columns will run closer together as they ascend until the top is reached, 290 feet, where a steel platform, 200 feet square, will be constructed. Ascending from four corners of the platform will be four more steel columns, running up 40 feet to a pyramid tower, protected by a railing, which will serve as an observatory. In summer the platform will be open and used for a roof garden. In winter it will be closed in with glass and heated with steam. Mr. Ferris believes the platform will be sufficiently large to allow room for a stage and an orchestra when it is desired to use it as a roof garden.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A CURIOUS CUSTOM.

A Weekly Auction in Belfast at Which Nothing is Sold.

There is a weekly auction of linen goods in Belfast at which nothing is ever sold. About two hundred years ago there were two halls for selling linen in Belfast, the White Linen Hall and the Brown Linen Hall. In the former all bleached linen was sold, while the latter was exclusively reserved for the sale of brown or unbleached goods. Nearly a century ago a linen manufacturer in Belfast endowed the latter institution, and the deed of endowment contained a clause to the effect that a market should be held in the hall every Friday. Linen, however, began to be disposed of in other ways, and the halls were no longer useful. The White linen Hall was made into public offices, but the Brown Linen Hall still remains to fulfil its original functions. Every Friday morning Mr. McNicholl, an old man, opens the doors, takes his stand in the middle of the hall, and puts a single bale of unbleached linen up to auction. It is always the same old man and the same old bale. Nobody ever comes to buy it, because few people are aware of this remarkable custom.—Boston Herald.

The title of the Duke of Buckingham is said to have brought disaster to all the families that have borne it. In the family that owned the ducal seat at Stowe the dukedom ended in misfortune and is now extinct, but the property is still owned by the daughter of the late Duke.

Queen Victoria has such a horror of fire that she has organized a regular fire brigade among her servants. They had a very successful false alarm recently, and everyone was at his post. Prince Henry is chief of the little corps. The Queen takes great pleasure in watching the drill.
